Provider Relief Fund Federal Audits Are Here: What to Expect and How to Prepare (IA0214)

Target Audience: C-Suite, finance, legal

Speaker: Ben Fee, Health Law Attorney, Hall Render

The Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) has distributed nearly $170 billion in Provider Relief Fund (PRF) payments to eligible health care providers since April 2020. With the fund expended, the federal government has now started recipient audits. The scope of each audit can broadly cover compliance with the applicable terms and conditions attached to the receipt of relief fund payments, how an entity used these funds to reimburse eligible expenses and lost revenue, or specific relief fund compliance requirements such as the restriction against balance billing out-of-network patients for COVID-19 treatment. The audits can be conducted by HRSA with nongovernmental contractors, the Office of Inspector General, or other government agencies, and are in addition to the single audit requirement to which many recipients are subject. Despite the scope of the audit or which government agency oversees the work, providers should prepare for potential government audits now. Every provider relief fund recipient is required to comply with the relevant reporting obligations and other relief fund requirements and restrictions. Noncompliance can result in the recoupment of some or all the applicable relief fund payments.

Learning Objectives

- Understand the various provider relief fund audits and agencies conducting them.
- Prepare for future provider relief fund audits.
- Develop strategies and best practices to navigate provider relief fund audits.

February 23 – 10 a.m.-12 p.m.
